SAFER JOURNEYS TO SCHOOL >>>

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Northern Ireland Children's Commissioner (NICCY), Department for Regional Development (DRD) and the General Consumer Council (GCCNI) commissioned this research into children and young people's views into what are the key issues affecting their journeys to school and how could their journeys be improved. The impetus for this research came from children and young people who expressed concerns to NICCY about no seatbelts, the three for two rule, overcrowding and bullying on buses. For those who do not travel by bus, concerns were raised about the absence of footpaths and cycle paths and congestion at school buildings. This research also comes at a time when there have been widespread discussions about the cost of school transport provision. It is widely recognised that falling pupil numbers, the existence of selection and separation of pupils by religious denominations combined with the increasing cost of bus operations for home to school transport has meant a close scrutiny of school transport. Travel to school in Northern Ireland is provided by a variety of means. Free home to school transport is provided to a third of school children by Education and Library Boards (ELBs) through free travel on public transport, ELB bus, hire of other buses and taxis and the payment of cycle or car allowances.

This report has presented information from a large number of pupils and parents on their experiences and perceptions of the ways in which they travel to and from school. Concerns have been highlighted regarding safety on school buses, congestion, parking and traffic, road safety and personal safety and security while walking and travelling by public transport. The key concerns expressed by young people and parents through the school workshops, focus groups and questionnaire surveys are;

- Road safety – traffic levels and speeds, crossing roads and using footpaths safely
- Congestion
- Behaviour of other young people
- Fear of strangers
- Safety in some areas
- Journey times and distances to be travelled
- Perceived safety on public transport – supervision, overcrowding, standing and seating arrangements, behaviour and the age of vehicles

There are many reasons why particular modes are chosen for journeys to and/or from school. The reasons stated are all legitimate ones but some emanate from perceptions about other modes of transport and concerns about safety and security which form many of these perceptions. There can be no doubt that there are serious issues and concerns surrounding the provision of school transport. Many of these concerns have been expressed by the stakeholders who responded to the research as well. Operators, politicians and interested parties alike consider the following issues as cause for concern;

- overcrowding and behaviour on school buses
- seating arrangements and provision on buses
- standing on buses
- provision and enforcement of seatbelt wearing
- the 3 for 2 rule and capacity issues
- bullying

SCHOOL TRANSPORT STEERING GROUP

The steering group and supporting organisations with input for the school transport research consists of;

- Alison Loughlin, Parents Advice Centre
- Andy Bready, Department for Regional Development Roads Service
- Christina McKeever, NICCY Youth Panel
- Conor Fitzpatrick, NICCY Youth Panel
- Eamonn Brown, Sustrans
- Eddie Lynch, General Consumer Council for Northern Ireland
- Ken Smyth, NICCY Participation Manager
- Mary Anne Webb, NICCY Policy Officer
- Susan Dolan, Department for the Environment Northern Ireland
- Teresa Devlin, NICCY Head of Research, Policy and Service Review
- Professor Julian Hine, University of Ulster
- Dr Scott Mackey, University of Ulster
- Dr Banihan Gunay, University of Ulster

We would like to thank NICCY staff who took part in the research, the NICCY participation team and the following peer researchers:

- Ellie Lavan
- Daniel McGlade
- Niall Bole
- Victoria Keas
- Swapnil Patra
- Ciara Rehill
- Deboragh Curley

We would also like to thank the following schools, youth groups and parent groups for participating in the research:
